Hi Jed,

I just disagree, I had a firm offer from you, put in a lot of hours, sourced and attended angel investor pitches in the US representing the exchange with your full knowledge, reviewed legality and domicile issues in the US with counsel, and added demonstrable value on the market side, not to mention spent my own money and time on basis of that clear offer, as well as brainstormed strategy and direction for some time.

We agreed I wasn't currently interested in putting in more hours, but we certainly didn't agree that there was no ownership stake due.

Again, I don't know who owns the site right now, or what your deal with Mark is, hence my questions, but I'm a little annoyed at the 'dishonorable' vibe -- I'm trying to politely inquire and find out what the current disposition is.

To quote you in August:

I'd be into working together. How much time do you have to work on it?

I'm thinking I can set up some project management thing to track our time and just split the "company" based on that.

Thanks,
Jed.
